

CSD 360: Study USA ASHA Convention & Site

COMMUNICATION SCIENCES & DISORDERS

This course offers an exceptional opportunity to gain knowledge and skills for entry into a postgraduate program in speech pathology or audiology or to supplement learning and professional skills in a chosen profession by attending the American Speech Language Hearing Association Convention and also studying the cultural and linguistic diversity of the host site. We will provide students with experiences that provide knowledge of what employers and graduate programs are seeking in rising professionals and students. Additionally, students will gain a multicultural perspective by participating in events that promote understanding through educational and cultural programs. We will provide these experiences by interviews with potential future employers and with graduate programs in speech language pathology and/or audiology, attendance at a variety of educational sessions at the American Speech Language Hearing Association national convention, multicultural experiences at the House of Pacific Relations in Balboa Park and a Baja-Cali Food tour, and networking with university faculty, professionals, and fellow students scheduled through conference events.
