

Anth 630: Human Osteology

Sociology & Anthropology

This laboratory-based course is an introduction to human skeletal anatomy geared toward advanced students and graduate students. It combines forensic and archaeological methods to teach students how to identify and analyze human bone from archaeological sites.

3 Credits

Instruction Type(s)

- Seminar: Seminar for Anth 630

Subject Areas

- Anthropology

Related Areas

- Physical and Biological Anthropology

