

Envs 101: Humanities and the Environment

College of Liberal Arts

This interdisciplinary humanities course is designed to introduce students to thinking about the influence of the environment on human history and culture. Course content may include key concepts in environmental history, classics of environmental literature, theories of environmental philosophy and ethics, and ideas about the environment embedded in culture, religion, and the arts. Personal reflection as well as analysis of environmental questions will be encouraged. Students who have already taken Envs 301 may not enroll in Envs 101.
