

Law 500: Professional Identity Formation

School of Law

This class will introduce students to the concept of professional identity formation. Students will be able to define what professional identity formation is, generally, and specifically what it means to them, individually. This course is also designed to assist students in developing skills necessary for academic and professional success.

This is part of the required curriculum. First-year law students will audit the course in the fall and take it for ZF credit in the spring.
