

Econ 507: Economics of the Family

Economics

This course analyzes the oldest and most important institution in society, the family, from the perspective of economics. The course focuses on the role of exchange between spouses, parents with children, households and firms, households and government, and current and future generations.

3 Credits

Prerequisites

- Econ 398: Intermediate Microeconomics

Instruction Type(s)

- Lecture: Lecture for Econ 507

Subject Areas

- Econometrics and Quantitative Economics

Related Areas

- Applied Economics
- Development Economics and International Development
- Economics, General
- Economics, Other
- International Economics

