M.S. in Sport Management Description

The M.S. in sport management degree program offers a comprehensive and contemporary experiential graduate education that prepares students to advance in various careers within the dynamic and evolving sport industry. This mission is achieved by:

- Maintaining an accredited curriculum.
- Providing education with practical application that prepares students to thrive in numerous sport contexts and careers.

Students applying to the M.S. in Sport Management degree program must select one of two emphases: Online or Hybrid (Resident)

For the Online emphasis, the program is offered via a fully supported online learning system that incorporates features such as videoconferencing, interactive discussions, and other online collaborative technologies to provide a rich and immersive educational experience. All courses are asynchronous, and students are not required to travel to the Oxford campus. All concentrations within the M.S. in Sport Management program can be completed via the 100% Online emphasis.

For the Hybrid (Resident) emphasis, students are able to take a combination of on-campus and online courses that best meet their educational and personal needs. All concentrations within the M.S. in Sport Management program can be completed via the Hybrid (Resident) emphasis.
