DIGITAL MEDIA STUDIES (DMST)

DMST 1010: Intro. to Digital Media St.
Writing and Rhetoric
This course is an introduction to the interdisciplinary minor in digital media studies that explores the meaning of information and digital literacy. Students will learn to think critically about the ethical and legal issues created by the information age while building a solid foundation of understanding across a broad range of information technology subfields.
3 credits
Potentially offered with the following Instruction Type(s):
Lecture

DMST 3980: Top. in Digi. Med. St. Abroad
Writing and Rhetoric
Students complete approved course work on a digital media studies topic at a foreign university. May be repeated once for credit with change in topic.
3 credits
Potentially offered with the following Instruction Type(s):
Lecture

DMST 3990: Topics in Digital Media St.
Writing and Rhetoric
Content varies. May be repeated once for credit with a change in topic.
3 credits
Potentially offered with the following Instruction Type(s):
Lecture

DMST 4010: Digital Media St. Practicum
Writing and Rhetoric
Students apply the skills and methodologies involved in creating, managing, and producing a complex, consultative, digital media project. They will study and apply project development and management concepts while working in teams to produce digital media solutions to client- based problems. The course may be repeated once for credit.
3 credits
Potentially offered with the following Instruction Type(s):
Internship