

Coun 713: Mult & Soc Justice in Child/Adol Coun

Multicultural and Social Justice Considerations in Child and Adolescent Counseling. This is a graduate-level course designed to address contemporary topics regarding diversity in child and adolescent counseling. In this course, students will become proficient at identifying major tenets of the Multicultural and Social Justice Advocacy Counseling Competencies (MSJCC) as well as theories and models of child and adolescent counseling that support operationalization of the MSJCC. Students will develop professional dispositions necessary to implement the socioecological model embedded within the counseling and advocacy interventions domain of the MSJCC to support multiculturally competent and socially just praxis with children, adolescents, their families, and their communities.
